Packing and Shipping:

Packaging and Shipping for Cosmetic Tins

Cosmetic tins should be packaged to protect them from being scratched, dented or cracked during shipment. The tins should be placed in strong cardboard boxes and wrapped with bubble wrap or packing paper for extra protection. The boxes should be sealed with packaging tape to prevent the boxes from opening during transit. All packages should be labeled clearly with the address of the recipient.

Cosmetic tins should be shipped via an insured and traceable method, such as a courier or postal service. Tracking numbers should be obtained from the shipping service and provided to the customer. Delivery times and costs should be taken into consideration when selecting a shipping method.
